Intraday Thoughts – Neutral-to-Slightly Bullish

USD/MYR opened 0.02% higher at 4.1242 and climbed further to 4.1555 at the point of writing. Daily outlook from current levels is neutral-to-slightly bullish as the pair continues to recover from oversold conditions. Domestically, the September PMI Manufacturing reading by S&P Global showed a slight deterioration from the month before, while over in the US, the focus tonight will be on the ISM Manufacturing index for September and the JOLTS data for August. Support for the pair today pops up at 4.1319 (S1), while some resistance is seen above at 4.1710 (R1).

1-Month Outlook – USD/MYR Neutral-to-Slightly Bullish

The USD/MYR outlook is neutral-to-slightly bullish as the pair consolidates after the recent MYR rally, which has seen it move into oversold conditions. While expectations of broad USD weakness going forward should continue to play out in the medium term, with the currency weighed down by a cooling labour prints, further signs of disinflation and a gradual weakening in economic conditions, the USD could regain some ground in the short term. The Fed reduced interest rates by 50bps at the September FOMC meeting and indicated more cuts to come this year, with the dot plot pointing to a further reduction of another 50bps for the rest of the year. The market though is pricing in nearly another three 25bps cuts for the remaining 2 FOMC meetings for the year, and an adjustment to this pricing could lend some support to the USD in the near term. Domestically, the MYR will be supported by expectations for an extended pause in the OPR.
